A blog post titled "How to Overcome Writer's Block" ## Forget overpriced schools, long days in a crowded classroom, and pitifully poor results. These websites and apps cover myriads of science, art, and technology topics. They will teach you practically anything, from making hummus to building apps in node.js, most of them for free. There is absolutely no excuse for you not to master a new skill, expand your knowledge, or eventually boost your career. You can learn interactively at your own pace and in the comfort of your own home. It's hard to imagine how much easier it can possibly be. Part of the collection: The War Nerd (2011) by Chris Hedges and Joe Sacco (2012) and The Alphabet of Manliness (2012) by Robert Bly.

Tom Sturges, director of the film, makes comments about the film's basis for his own website: "Jumping to conclusions is easy. As a kid, I played cowboys and Indians. The evidence was all around me — we had a library — but we never did any research. I'm even-handed about all things in the world... But to this day I'm still an amateur skeptic. Mostly I consider myself a skeptic, but not that skeptical."

Alison Hume, a critic for the "New York Times", concludes her review by saying: "As far as genre films go, Mr. Sturges's '21 Jump Street' is a perfectly workmanlike example. The film makes no pretensions to high or low art. It's a good time at the movies." In 2012, it was reported that 20th Century Fox studios was looking to market "21 Jump Street" for television. In 2014, MTV announced that the show would be returning after an 11-year hiatus with a third season of 10 episodes. A preview of the show aired on January 18, 2015 and the first episode aired on March. The series stars Jonah Hill and Johnny Depp and was released on April 10, 2015.
